In this weight the € width seems to be overcompensated, I'd take it a bit back.

Maybe making "з" slightly narrower by taking away some of the terminal weight (see "3") would help those very wide and flat curves at the top and the bottom?

I'd like a more definitive flick upwards, so that there is a longer vertical bit.

A touch wider?

а е є с з в б о ф р ю г т к ж х

м у и й н п ч ц ш щ я ъ ы ѝ

ль њ ѣ л д э ц ц д э

I'd try to make the curvature of the arc in "ч" look closer to the one on h, n etc.

A touch taller bowl?

ч → ч

The diagonal a bit too thick (see M, y, v)

A bit steeper diagonal?

A bit longer maybe?

wider shoulder

No thickening at the end of the stroke

I'd go for a bigger ball/drop at the end of the thin stroke. And I'd also get rid off the gradual transition from thin to thick: I'd keep the vertical part of the stroke thin all the way until it turns and ends with a heavy terminal.

IMO the э is too wide and both terminals are a touch too heavy. Especially the bottom one: I'd go for a size similar to the bottom terminal in "s"

The shoulder is a touch too shy in ц, ш, д and similar. I'd add 4 units to its width...

This one is probably a mistake

Shouldn't these terminals be more like this one? Following the logic of Regular and Black

In this weight I wouldn't make it narrower than 1 could these be heavier/longer?
